Privacy Policy

1. Purposes of processing and nature of the transmission of personal data

Pursuant to Article 130.4 of Privacy Decree 196/2003, Baralan reserves the right to process, store, archive and inform its employees of the data you provide solely for:

- a. Purposes strictly associated with and essential to the performance by the company of the e-commerce services or to the conduct of company activities to provide those services.

The transmission of these personal data is optional, but in case of refusal no type of relationship can be established.

- b. Purposes related to commercial information and promotions for the development of new services and the offering of products and/or the possibility of enjoying special conditions, also through third parties, and for communication to firms specialized in information and commercial promotion or to verify the degree of satisfaction in connection to the services provided by the company.

The processing related to those purposes requires the permission of the subject interested, and failure to give permission to process those data will preclude the sending of information or advertising material or the conduct of marketing activities and determination of the level of satisfaction with the service provided .

2. Correction, addition and cancellation of the data

- In all cases, pursuant to Article 7 of Decree 196/2003, you shall be entitled to update the data, add to them, cancel them, request their non-disclosure, and oppose their processing by contacting Baralan at the e-mail address: mail@baralan.com.
